San Diego-based venture firm Enterprise Partners has made two new additions to its investment team, hiring Teak Murphy and Andrew Summers as associates.

Prior to joining Enterprise, Murphy was an associate with West coast investment bank Montgomery & Co., providing the firm with financial advisory services, including buy- and sell-side representation, fairness opinions and initial public offerings in the technology sector. Prior to Montgomery, he worked at Cowen & Co., providing mergers and acquisitions advisory services to technology companies.

Summers, who previously served as a summer associate with the firm, provided strategic and financial advisory services to emerging growth and middle market companies for more than six years in investment banking and consulting. Summers also served as a volunteer consultant to a non-profit community development venture capital fund.

Founded in 1985, Enterprise Partners has more than $1.1 billion in capital under management. The firm, currently investing from its sixth fund, focuses on seed, early stage and promising later stage companies across a broad spectrum of technologies and the life sciences.
